NORTHWEST COUNCIL.

The approaching session of the Northwest Council promises to be a very important one. There is a widespread feeling among the people of the Territories that they are entitled to a more representative institution than our present Council, and that steps should be taken to secure a popular assembly wholly responsible to the people. But the census which was taken last fall showed our population not to be as large as was expected, and that if all the white population were represented, according to the Northwest Territories Act we could not have a sufficient number of representatives to form a Legislative Assembly. Such being the case, and as the present Dominion Parliament can hold only one more session, it is hardly to be expected that they would legislate to make any radical changes in the Government of the Territories. Representation in the Commons having been granted, responsible government must quickly follow, and the utmost limit of time that may be allowed for the Northwest Council to exist in its present form is two years. While asserting the right to responsible government, the Council should at this session make provision for the representation of the whole people. Every portion of the Territories in which there is a settler should be included in some electoral district. This would provide a large legislative body for the next two years and prepare the country more fully for the provincial form of government. While assuming that this cannot be attained in less than two years, it cannot be gainsaid that the actual present population of the Territories is greater than that of Manitoba when when organized as a province, or even than that of British Columbia at the present time. If therefore these provinces were entitled to provincial autonomy, the Territories are also entitled to it. Keeping this in mind the Council should assert the right of the people to responsible government in order that it may be obtained at the earliest possible moment.

PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY.

It is argued by some that a provincial form of government should be organized for the whole of the Territories. While a change to a more responsible form than the present is very desirable, when a provincial government is formed it should be for Assiniboia alone, or for such of the provisional districts as are ready for it, but in any case for each one separately. If such a form of administration were organized for the whole of the Territories, it would be an arrangement for a number of years, and would prevent the organization of any one district separately till perhaps long after all are fully entitled to it. In two years time at least Assiniboia will be fully prepared for its own organization, and why should it be brought into an arrangement which would soon prove irksome. If all the Territories were organized under one administration very soon one or more of the districts would be demanding as a right its separate autonomy, and if conceded would result in changes from time to time that would be the cause of much confusion. It would be much better to organize each province as occasion demanded, and as it was intended when the Northwest was divided into provisional districts.

The Regina Leader goes in for self-government for the Territories at once, but under one form for the whole. This phase of the subject we deal with in another article. Our contemporary wants three members for the Regina district. It forgets the incongruous shape of the electoral division, that it extends to within two miles of Qu'Appelle, and that the people of this town have something to say on that score. Why does not the Leader suggest that the whole country be organized as the Regina district, and call all Council members for Regina? In the article referred to our contemporary by a lapses plume leaves the impression that it favors a second legislative chamber, though we do not believe that was intended. It also makes the very great mistake of calling the present plan a "wasteful" one. This need hardly be denied as no one supposes a responsible executive would be less expensive, but the reverse. The editor of the Leader should read his articles twice before putting them in the hands of the printer. They might then possibly be characterized with a little more common sense.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Vote for Mr. G. S. Davidson.

The Imperial Government has restored to General Strange the amount deducted from his pension for the time he was on active service.

His Honor, Elect-Governor Dawley has returned from his trip west. The holiday has been well earned by His Honor, and he returns to his duties very much invigorated.

The memorial monument to the members of the 90th Battalion killed in the battles of Fish Creek and Batache was unveiled in Winnipeg on Tuesday of last week with appropriate ceremonies.

The construction of the Hudson's Bay Railway is to be commenced immediately. The contractors for the first forty miles are advertising in the Winnipeg papers for teams and men to go to work at once.

Elsewhere in THE PROGRESS this week will be found the declaration by the Toronto Mail of its independence of party restraint, and also its attitude on the question of Prohibition. We do not endorse all it says on the Quebec constitution, but we heartily agree with our contemporary on the liquor question. Further reference will be made to the quoted articles next week, meantime we commend the one last named to the thirty Northwest editors who crave so much for the introduction of a license system into the Northwest.

Remember when you poll your vote that Mr. G. S. Davidson is the candidate best qualified from his public energy to represent the District. He would be an active member of the Council, while the other remaining candidate would be a mere passive representative.

Bulgaria is defying Russia, and Russia is brought face to face with a long line of European bayonets, behind which stand Austrian, English and German soldiers. It will now be in order for Russia to defy these or withdraw from her interference with the Bulgarians.

The Winnipeg Free Press and the Regina Leader have become most affectionate over their joint advocacy of immediate elections of representatives in the House of Commons. Neither of them voice the sentiments of the people of the territories. The editor of the Leader is thirsting for an election that will return him as member for West Assiniboia, and the Free Press does not care for the people so long as it can get a slap at the Government. The cost of any election in the Northwest would be too much to pay for one year's representation.

The Moosomin Courier has been enlarged to a four page seven column paper. The change in the make up improves its appearance very much, but the editor has not been able to "celebrate" the change apparently as he would like, for we find in his columns a classical disquisition headed "One half of which goes to the informer," which being interpreted means that he is down on the prohibitory liquor law of the Northwest. We are sorry that the Courier belongs to the old foggy party that would fain clog the irremediable progress of total abstinence. Our contemporary should follow in the wake of the Toronto Mail and declare for prohibition.

PROHIBITION.

The contest which took place in Maine the other day revived discussion of a variety of questions connected with the prohibitory law in that State. As usual, statistics were produced to show that prohibition had injured Maine; that the State instead of thriving was going back. It is no doubt, true that Maine is one of the least progressive members of the Union, but the argument that prohibition is the cause does not, in our opinion, appeal to common sense. If every inhabitant of, say, Ontario were to stop drinking tea to-morrow and take to water, or milk, no very serious injury would be done to business interests; yet we all know that a community has more to gain by ceasing to consume whiskey than by ceasing to consume tea. It will be said that the stoppage of whiskey drinking—we are using whiskey as a generic term for all intoxicants—would close the distilleries, the breweries, the saloons and the cooper-shops, and so throw a large number of persons out of employment. But it is very evident that the loss on this account would be small, that the cessation of the traffic would affect only a meagre percentage of the population while, on the other hand, it is manifest that the gain to the individual and indirectly to the community would be well marked. No man ever injured himself by putting away liquor; and it is impossible to believe that the backwardness of Maine is due to her prohibitory law. The secret of her slowness is to be found in the sterility of her soil, compared with the Western States, and in the movement of population westward from New England. To say that because whiskey-drinking is blamed the people are poor in pocket and broken in spirit, is to contend that good is evil, and to fly in the face of all human experience. The liquor side in Maine also makes a great deal out of the fact that the law does not prevent drinking absolutely. But then no preventive law prevents absolutely—if prevention were a complete cure we should not hear of murders or burglaries, or require the presence of police. It is certain, however, that under the Maine law drink is made a commodity in which it is disgraced as well as dangerous to deal; and when a trade reaches that depth its days are numbered. It may hide in the slums and contrive to escape detection by practising deceit, just as other outlaws do, but its power is gone, for having ceased to be decent it has ceased to attract. It is no reflection upon the justice or beneficence of any law to say that it does not perform miracles. There will always be men at war with society. All that can reasonably be expected of a law is that it should check the evil against which it is applied, and judged by that standard, the Maine law is eminently successful, and so is the Scott Act wherever a truly honest effort has been made to enforce it.

It is worthy of note that NEAL DOW and his friends are no longer classed either with fanatics or with fanatics. There are three stages, as WENDELL PHILLIPS used to say, in the history of every great movement—the first, when its advocates are deemed madmen, the second when they are declared to be extremists, and the third when they are hailed as deliverers. The anti-slavery men passed through all three, and the anti-whiskey men are now about half-way between Nos. 2 and 3. In Maine the victory is accomplished; in Ontario it is almost within sight. What is needed here more than anything else is a better understanding amongst temperance men as to the work yet to be done, and as to the proper means of doing it. And perhaps the cause would lose nothing if some of its more impatient leaders would adopt the motto of SAMUEL MORLEY, the English merchant prince and philanthropist, who died the other day after a life filled with good works, "Be zealous, but be liberal."

TO THE ELECTORS

—OF THE—

Qu'Appelle District.

GENTLEMEN,—

Through the much regretted resignation of Mr. Jackson, lately one of your Representatives in the North West Council, the Electors of the District are again within the two years called upon to select from amongst them a member to fill that honorable position.

Having been nominated and also having received a requisition signed by upwards of 150 voters asking me to stand as a candidate, I have much pleasure in, according to the request.

It is not without some feelings of my own short-comings and inability to fulfil the somewhat arduous and responsible duties of the office that I have come to the decision of placing my humble services for the acceptance of the Electors.

Should I be fortunate enough in being chosen, it shall be my aim and endeavor to devote my time and attention to the concerns of the Council and co-operating with my colleagues, Mr. Padey, work for the whole District.

My sympathies are entirely with those who agree that a more equitable redistribution of Electoral Districts and increased representation is necessary; thus extending the franchise to those who at present are deprived of that privilege, although justly entitled thereto.

But I shall take the opportunity before the election day of addressing the Electors in various parts of the District when I shall be pleased to answer any questions relative to the affairs of the District requiring attention in the Council.

I am, Gentlemen, Your obedient servant,
ROBERT CRAWFORD,
Indian Head, N. W. T., Oct. 1st, '80.

ADDRESS

ELECTORS

—OF THE—

District of Qu'Appelle

GENTLEMEN,—

Having been requested by a large number of the electors of the district of Qu'Appelle, to offer myself as a candidate to fill the seat in the Northwest Council rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. T. W. Jackson, I have, after careful and deliberate consideration, decided to accept the nomination, and most earnestly solicit your support.

I shall, if elected, devote that time and attention to the duties of the position as its importance demands. The re-organization of the electoral districts and the claims of all outlying settlements are presented shall receive my first and most careful attention, hopefully so doing to secure for the people a legislative assembly at an early date, directly responsible to them, thus securing entire control of their own affairs.

I shall at an early date discuss before you such questions as are likely to occupy the attention of the Northwest Council at its next session.

If elected, I shall at all times carefully look after the particular interests of all portions of the district and see that all receive a fair and equitable share of the appropriations from the "Local Improvement Fund" of the Council.

As I cannot hope to meet you all I ask that you give me your vote and influence on the 14th day of October next, and if elected, I promise to serve you faithfully, impartially and to the best of my ability.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen, Your obedient servant,
G. S. DAVIDSON.

OUR POSITION AS A PUBLIC JOURNAL.

Toronto Mail.

Some remarks concerning the Conservative press and its relations to the Government, made by Sir John Macdonald at London the other day, render it incumbent upon The Mail to define its position as a public journal. Since it passed into the hands of the present owners, The Mail has been an independent Conservative journal. A mere organ—an instrument manipulated by a certain set of politicians—it has not been; and we need scarcely add that at this stage in its career, when it is enjoying an unprecedented measure of public favor, it does not intend to assume so unhappy, not to say so unworthy a role. The statement made by a contemporary on Saturday, that the directors of The Mail by formal resolution some years ago placed its columns at the disposal of Sir John Macdonald, is a pure fabrication. The Mail is and for nine years has been wholly and absolutely independent of all governments and politicians whatsoever; and, owing nothing directly or indirectly to them, or to their influence, it has not suffered them to dictate its course upon any question of high or low degree; but has everywhere and always asserted its right to think and speak for itself. This position The Mail will continue to occupy, our conception of the true functions of a great public journal inclining us more and more to the belief that the public interests are better served by free and healthful criticism than by indiscriminate devotion to one side or the other.

We have said that since the change which took place in its ownership in 1877 The Mail has chosen, as an independent paper, to give a general support to the interests of the Conservative party, of which Sir John Macdonald is the honored leader, its conviction being that, on the whole, his policy was the policy best calculated to advance the welfare of Canada. But it was almost inevitable, considering the perfect freedom of our position, that differences of opinion should from time to time arise between him and us. As may be gathered from Sir John's remarks at London, we differ from him just now upon a question of great moment. Though not conscious of being influenced in the remotest degree by religious bigotry, The Mail is nevertheless persuaded that a crisis in our affairs is at hand, in consequence of the overshadowing power possessed at Toronto, Quebec and Ottawa by the Roman Catholic Church. We would grant to every church the utmost latitude of thought and action within legitimate bounds; but the vast organization of which we speak is everywhere invading the domain of civil government and undermining the authority of the State. In Quebec that Church is the State Church, licensed to invoke British law for the collection of tithes and of enormous assessments she levies upon the people for the erection of her edifices. The temporal and spiritual privileges which she enjoys, enormous and exorbitant beyond any Old World parallel at present existing, enable her to control the Provincial Legislature as well as the great majority of the French members of the Dominion Parliament. The Riel agitation in Quebec has revealed the presence of a concealed imposthume more dangerous than an open wound. In Ontario, although she is here the Church of the minority, we see her holding the balance of power between the two parties, and wringing from the Government of the day concessions to which she has no just claim. Why should his Grace Archbishop Lynch be permitted to emaculate the Common school system of Upper Canada? Why should he be allowed to draw revenues for his religious orders from the public treasury, to tamper with Protestant school books and even with the Book of Books, to nominate Roman Catholics to office without regard to their fitness, to secure for his Separate schools privileges and exemptions denied to the schools of the majority? The danger resulting from this anomalous state of things has long been felt; but our public men shrink from a contest that is inevitable for fear of injuring party interests, and are content to tread the round of make-believe in placid comfort. The Mail takes a very different view of its duty. Looking with a single eye to the future welfare of Canada, we believe the time has come for compelling the Roman Catholic Church to keep within her proper sphere. She has no moral right to her extraordinary status in Quebec, her existence as a State Church being unjust alike to the habitant whom she crushes with her imposts, to the English speaking settler whom she is eradicating from the soil to make room for title-payers, and to the people of the whole Dominion who are of necessity affected by the injury done to a component part. She has no right to interfere for her own aggrandizement or for the curtailment of the liberty of others in the public affairs of Ontario. She has no right to claim special representation in the Provincial and Federal Governments. She has no right to appear at all, as a Church, within the field of civil polity or secular administration. She is entitled like every other religious body to the widest freedom of conscience and worship, but beyond that her claims are mere usurpations which must be met and overthrown, even though, in the case of Quebec, an alteration of the constitution should be found necessary.

Sir John Macdonald does not share these views, and it is needless to say that they meet with no favors from the politicians on the other side. It is not improbable that the Mail may be compelled to differ from both sides on some other questions that are pressing for solution—notably the liquor question, which we think must be handled with far more determination than has yet been evinced by either the Reform or the Conservative party. It sometimes happens that the journal which assumes an independent stand finds itself "between the increased points of mighty opposites"—a variance with friend and foe. But in dealing with the grave matters referred to, we put our trust not to the politicians so much as in the enlightened conscience of the Canadian people who have never yet averted their faces from a good cause. Upon other issues, such as the maintenance of British connection, the encouragement of native industry, the construction of railways, etc., The Mail will continue to be an earnest advocate of the policy of the Conservative party, which has done so much for the material progress of this young community. But the public will be good enough to understand that in all things, great and small, The Mail will not be an organ, but a thoroughly independent journal, bound at any cost to give expression to its honest convictions, whilst treating we hope with becoming respect the opinions of all those on either side who feel called upon to differ from us.

It is reported that negotiations are in progress between the Government and the C. P. R. Co., for the transfer of the Government telegraph system in the Northwest to the latter company. This would include the line to Edmonton and branches in the Saskatchewan country, in all about 1,000 miles of wire.

The Mail justly observes: "A little over a year ago the Reform press shouted at Sir John Macdonald that if he did not execute Riel the people would hold him and his colleagues responsible for the failure of justice. Riel was hanged, and the other day when the Premier was in London, Mr. Mills' paper coolly told him that the execution was allowed to take place to order to appease the Orange cry for the rebel's life. What would the same paper be now saying if Riel had hanged?

A CLERICAL HUMORIST.

As a specimen of Rev. W. H. Milburn, present chaplain of the Congress, at Washington, stories about himself we may give an adventure he once had in the stage-coach between Montgomery, where he was then settled, and Tuscaloosa. A gentleman and two ladies entered at Marion and the elder of the two ladies commenced a conversation with him. It must be premised that a leather cap, linen overcoat, a figure completely covered with dust, and an exceedingly youthful appearance, did not render his presence very imposing. "Travelling, sir?" the lady began, in a voice which at once revealed her New England origin. "Yes, madam, as far as Tuscaloosa." Ah, I see; on your way to college." "No." "What! Are you not going to take a course, then?" "I left college some time since." "You've been to college?" "Yes, madam." "What one?" "Illinois college." "Ah, I guess that don't amount to much. Where do you live, sir?" "I can scarce be said to live anywhere; but I have been spending some time in Montgomery." "Ah, in Montgomery. Do you know the Rev. Mr. Milburn of that place?" "Yes, madam, I have some acquaintance with him." "I've had a great desire to hear him preach. My husband, niece and myself stopped in Montgomery last Saturday, but unfortunately I was taken very ill in the night at the hotel, and was so sick all the next day that none of us could go out to church. We were very much disappointed." "I don't think you missed much." "What do you mean, sir?" she said rather tartly. "Only that I heard him preach twice on Sunday, and I didn't think much of the sermons." "You didn't think much of the sermons," she replied, with a sneer. "I think it perfectly disgusting to hear the young men of the present age talk about ministers; that's the regular cant, nothing is eloquent or great enough for our world to be smart young men. If an angel from heaven were to come down and preach I suppose you would criticize him. Your mother ought to have taught you better, sir, than to speak slightly of eminent divines; I'd have done it if I had been your mother. Birch oil—birch oil, sir, in this thing that's wanted in the education of these times." "Birch oil," madam, replied Milburn, with great humility, "I had no notion of it, I'm sorry Mr. Milburn, or of hitting the subject, I respect towards the Canadian ministers." "Oh, not of course you didn't. After a moment she continued: "I suppose you mean to say that 'No.' " "Madam, sir?" "No." "Ah, you are going to be a paragon and not a personal man now." "Yes, what would you say I should like to know what profession you belong to?" "I am a preacher, madam." "A preacher!" she exclaimed, with unforgotten surprise. "Do you belong to any church?" "To the Methodist." "Oh, I beg your pardon," she said; "I thought from your appearance you must be one of the Come-outers. We are just from Boston, where we've been visiting our friends, and they've a dreadful lot of people these that wear long hair and look very frowsy, and are called Come-outers. I don't know where they come from, but I can guess where they're going to. I thought you must be one of them." Then bethinking herself she replied, "To the Methodist church! I see how it is. Young man," she proceeded with great solemnity, "envy and jealousy are the meanest passions that rankle in the human bosom, and I am afraid that nothing is more common than for young ministers to have such feelings towards their elders and their betters. Let me warn you against indulging that; for it looks to me very much as if you had such feelings towards the gentleman of whom we have been speaking. You are just beginning life—get rid of them, or they will ruin you." "I am very much obliged to you for your advice," replied Milburn, "but really I am not aware that I am the victim of these bad passions, and Mr. Milburn is the last man in the world of whom I would be jealous or envious." "You may think so, but, oh, the heart is deceitful and desperately wicked!" She then went on, in a more cheerful tone, "May I take the liberty of asking your name?" "Certainly, madam; my name is Milburn." "Ah!" she said, "any relation to the gentleman of whom we have been speaking?" "To tell you the truth, I am not aware that there is any other person of that name in Montgomery." "Are you the pastor of a Methodist church there?" "I am; and you must allow me to thank you for the manner in which you have defended me from myself." Soon after the coach reached Greensborough, where the parties went their several ways; and Milburn interviewed his fair New England interrogator no more.

OUR TERMS.

We have placed our yearly subscription at the low rate of ONE DOLLAR, with the object of enforcing advance payment. We can much better afford to publish a paper at that price when we know that every paper going out is paid for, than if we took the chances of collecting accounts at a higher figure. Besides we will thus speedily secure a larger circulation, which will enhance the value of our advertising columns. LOOK AFTER LADS.

In our cities, where trade drives and is exacting, and where amusements and fashion hold such despotic sway, this evil-for it is an evil-of absenteeism from paternal and maternal duties is a growing one and threatens to injure both individuals and society more than we may expect. Hurried life-life too exclusively confined to the counting-room; life with the crowd in the boarding-house or hotel; life that is restless and gay to the verge of dissipation-this sort of life, with its obviously demoralizing effects upon America in its teens, is quite too common. Verily, it might properly be said that parties have no moral right to get married and have the "olive plants" spring up around any table but the table in their own domesticity, where they can and are anxious to look after the welfare, the growth and the culture of their offspring.

The Pamist tells us that "God setteth the solitary in families," which means, we suppose, that the way people ought to live is in households where the natural relations and the natural affections shall have the privacy, the separation from the great bustling world and the converse of people they require for their right enjoyment and their pure and healthful exercise, yet how rarely is this ordination of Providence interfered with and disregarded, omnivorously so, in our great and multitudinous towns. Indeed it is or is becoming, a very serious question, how what are assumed the imperative demands of business, and what are felt to be the almost irresistible solicitations of "society," can be reconciled with a decently faithful regard to the claims of domestic life.

Be a boy while you are a boy; a well-behaved, polite boy; a manly boy; a courageous, self-reliant boy; no milk, sop boy tied to his mother's skirts, but still a boy; not a little weakling fop, a precious snob, a conceited monkey among the airs and acquiring the habits of grown-up dandies and fast characters. Don't make a self-indulgent small gentleman of him. Teach him to wait upon and take care of himself and to respect his inferiors and treat them courteously and kindly. Pray save him from the absurdity of a new and kid gloves and clothes that are not suitable for downright hearty play. It may be pretty and aristocratic and a sign of your opulence to dress him up in the height of fashion; but in so doing you run the risk of spoiling him for any robust and useful living.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL

Practically all of our readers have occasion to use a dictionary every day. In some cases words cannot be correctly spelled. In others the pronunciation is difficult. While in still other cases the meaning is not understood. This is true, not only of children and of the uneducated, but of many of the more intelligent as well; and every one who attempts to do without Webster's Practical Dictionary attempts to do without one of the most important tools for intellectual improvement.

Webster's Practical is an entirely new work by its editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged and contains more than twice the amount of matter and illustrations ever before offered for the price.

—Messrs. H. Jagger and J. Scott are in Regina as witnesses on the Prince Albert mail robbery trial.

—A prairie fire got started about a mile to the west of us on Monday, and ran near the town taking a northeasterly direction. The numerous fire breaks prevented its running very far.

—There have been some serious prairie fires east and west of here. From Broadway eastward several families have been burned out, and the fires west in the vicinity of Regina have done considerable damage.

—R. F. Robertson, of Carrot river recently brought a carload of stock for his ranch. It included 2 thoroughbred Durham bulls and 1 heifer, besides 71 sheep. They were taken across the country north from here.

—On Tuesday night's train Red Crow, head chief, and One Spot, minor chief, of the Blood Indians, and North Axe, head chief of the Piegiens, went east on a trip to Ottawa and the principal cities of Ontario. They were accompanied by Mr. J. L. Hewren, interpreter of the Indian department.

—Bright and early on Monday morning our old friend, Mr. Edward Daniels of this town, courageously faced the minister, Rev. Alfred Andrews, with his affianced, Mrs. Mary Ann Beers, and was duly married at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Holmgren. Long live the honored couple.

—Mr. Cluston, contractor in charge of the erection of the buildings in connection with St. John's College, a few days ago received a handsome expression of the esteem which is entertained for him by the men employed under his direction. Taking advantage of the occasion of the approaching completion of the buildings, they surrounded him in his office, when Mr. E. G. Weeks read a complimentary address, and also on behalf of the workmen whom he represented, made a presentation of a handsome gold ring to Mr. Cluston. The kind expression was duly acknowledged by the recipient.

—School meeting for election of Trustees on Monday next.

—The first number of the Regina Journal is to appear on Friday.

—We regret to learn that the buildings of Mr. E. J. Froom have been destroyed by a recent prairie fire.

—The Fort Qu'Appelle Agricultural Society's fall exhibition will be held at the Fort on Thursday, the 14th inst.

—The South Qu'Appelle Agricultural Association fall show will be held here on Friday, the 15th inst. It promises to be well attended.

—The man that can secure the most benefits for the district is the man to send to the Northwest Council; that man is Mr. G. S. Davidson.

—The Wolseley Agricultural Society held their annual fall exhibition on Tuesday. It was a decided success. Particulars and prize list next week.

WE WONDER

—When it will rain?

—Why the subscriptions for the bell ringing were never collected?

—When work will be commenced on the Wood Mountain and Qu'Appelle Railway?

—Why those street arabs that heave stones, etc., at buildings in town, are not suppressed?

—How Mr. Councillor Ross could consistently vote against an extension of the time for building the elevator in Qu'Appelle, and within five minutes say to Mr. W. W. McMillan, "I am greatly pleased at the Council granting you the extension of time for building the elevator?"

SCHOOL INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

We give below the report on Qu'Appelle school of the Inspector of Protestant Public Schools:

Monday, 6th September, 1886.

It affords me much pleasure to say the pupils of this school passed a very creditable examination in their various classes. I find the teacher an energetic, careful instructor, alive to the welfare of each pupil in every class. About 42 children are present today, yet with 83 on register, I would suggest the necessity of engaging an assistant, as one man cannot long continue to do the work of so large a school. I find time-table and register satisfactory. Authorized books in use. School building is comfortable but rather small.

T. GROVER, Inspector.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

On Saturday morning about 1 o'clock, the Pacific express, excepting the Pullman car, was burned fifty-eight miles east of Rat Portage. The filling of the muskeg gave way and the rails swerved to the water, in place of keeping a straight line. The bad place was just beyond a sharp curve in the road, and the train was almost on it before it could be seen. The engineer at once reversed the engine and put on the brakes, though too late to prevent a disaster. In a moment the engine turned on her side; the tender stood on end; the second class car turned over; the sleeper remained on the track. The lamps exploded in the baggage car and set fire to the train, burning up nearly all the baggage and all the cars except the Pullman. The loss is estimated at $10,000. Engineer Esterley was seriously wounded and has since died. J. T. Lyons, fireman, is scalded on left leg. Hugh Sutherland, M. P., with his wife and two children were on the train.
